

It is my understanding that the law the FCC is proposing is weaker than the current law in the state of Indiana. I am an intelligent, capable, and competent person who can decide for herself what I need and what I don't need. One thing I don't need is unwanted phone calls offering to sell me things I don't want or asking me to reveal personal information that I don't even share with my closest friends. Please do not weaken the current law in Indiana. It has reduced my unwanted calls to zero making my evenings at home peaceful, productive, and more pleasurable.
